Recognition of Prior Learning

It is important to note that there is more than one way to obtain a qualification. Recognition of Prior Learning is particular to persons who have been actively practicing in a field of employment or occupation where a qualification has either not existed or where circumstance has prevented the person from obtaining a qualification, despite them performing the functions of the occupation. The RPL process allows the person to show through a process of activities that they have acquired the knowledge, skills and workplace experience to be certified against the criteria of the qualification or a Professional Designation.

RPL is a formal process measured against a strict set of criteria as set out by the Curriculum and Quality Councils and is formally assessed through a series of submissions and assessment to confirm the acquired knowledge, skills and practical application meets the qualification or designation criteria and can therefore be certified.

Should the person not meet all the criteria for the RPL process, they are referred to a Skills Development Provider to complete the required programme to assist them in their preparation for the qualification exam.
